the IAEA definition. Its stockpile of enriched uranium is now 22 times JCPoA limits. Iran has also installed additional advanced centrifuges in Natanz and continues to expand its centrifuge infrastructure which could be used to support a significantly increased ability to produce enriched uranium in blatant disregard for JCPoA provisions. We also recall significant work previously reported on uranium metal, which is a key step for the development of a nuclear weapon, and takes Iran dangerously close to actual weapons-related activity.

As the DG's report makes clear the list of activities that the Agency is unable to carry out in relation to JCPoA monitoring is extensive and includes verification of: the production of heavy water; the amount of in-process low-enriched uranium; stable isotope production; as well as a number of broader nuclear commitments. The extent of this frustration of the Agency's responsibilities was further exacerbated in June 2022 following Iran's
