EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Iran nuclear deal, finalized in July 2015 between the P5+1 world powers and Tehran, encouraged some in the West that the Iranian economy would finally turn a corner and be set on a path of gradual progress. The reader is encouraged to evaluate economic structures and policies, as opposed to unsupported notions that sanctions relief will generate all accompanying change regardless of the ruling system of religious faith (absolute clerical rule).

This study starts with property ownership, where an ever increasing trend is revealed through which ownership of property in various spheres of the economy is gradually shifted from the population and large towards a minority ruling elite comprised of the Supreme Leader's office and the IRGC.

This transformation is enabled by the regime's constitution, adopted in December 1979, all of the principles and articles of which, according to the
